If a student owns a book, and it is a "complimentary copy" and then chooses to sell it to either their bookstore, or to a book buyer who recycles the textbook, then it may end up being sold at a store that sells textbooks. If they sell instructor edition textbooks, it is usually the case that the content of those books is not different than regular student version books, because if there are answers in the books then the store may choose not to sell those.

Ok well I bought an economics textbook from amazon, when i recieved it I removed some of the "used book" stickers and it revealed a box that said in was an instructor's sample copy and not for sale. I would like to resell it after I'm done with it. Would that be illegal? I'm thinking no because you can't tell people what to do with something that you had provided them with for free.
