Persian Art: Collecting the Arts of Iran in the 19th Century

Persian art and architecture was influenced early on by the older civilizations of Elam and Susiana in the region and by neighboring Mesopotamia. Early Elamite artworks focused on depictions of animals and the use of geometric and imaginative designs and the art of Susa mirrored this paradigm but expanded upon it through the representations of dogs. Dogs, in fact, seem to have been among the most popular artistic representations of Susiana.

Cambridge Scholars Publishing. The Shaping of Persian Art

The Persian Empire had an extremely rich tradition of court painting, and its various centres of royal patronage produced some of the greatest painters of all time. As it was uncommon for Persian artists to sign their works until the 16th century, an understanding of the particular features of key schools makes it easier to recognise works that may have passed through many hands and many countries.
