You Come Too is a collection of Robert Frost's favorite poems that portray a perfect balance between lyrical and scenic poetry. Some of the classics in this collection include "Mending Wall," "Fire and Ice," "The Road Not Taken," and, of course, "You Come Too." A great read for all ages. -Megan M.

You Come Too is a collection of Frost's favorite poetry for young readers and I wanted so much to read and connect, as I did with Howl. Sadly, aside from a few poems like ("Acquaintance with the Night"), the connection was tenuous. Maybe the best I can say is that it's just not for me, and that's okay.

(1915, North of Boston) _____ “The Pasture,” Robert Frost’s introductory poem for North of Boston, is a vehicle to express the intent of his poetry collection—to provide fresh insight and clarity that may “rake the leaves” that mar readers’ present perspectives. Frost underlines this notion by incorporating images such as “clean[ing] the pasture spring,” “watch[ing] the water clear,” and a “little calf” that “totters ...

Robert Frost observed in his wife, Elinor, a desire to live "a life that goes rather poetically." The same could be said of many members of the Frost family, over several generations. In You Come Too, Frost's granddaughter, Lesley Lee Francis, combines priceless personal memories and rigorous research to create a portrait of Frost and the women, including herself, whose lives he touched.
